Arson Suspected In 2 Riverview Fires

COSTLY FLORAL FIRE. These two photos tell the story of a spec tacular fire at Riverview Orchids, Inc., Saturday afternoon in which arson is suspected. The top photo shows flames leaping high above the two-story brick structure at the height of the blaze in which the loss may reach $150,000. The extreme heat forced firemen to fight the flames from a distance most of the time. Note the water being sprayed from the right. The section of the building at the right housed the pipe and repair shop where the fire is believed to have started in the attic section. The center section contained assembling, packing and shipping departments and the potting section was on the left. The bottom photo, taken Sunday afternoon, shows the twisted ruins.

The Kids Will Be On The Move Again

Vacation time will be over soon for the district's thousands of school children and they will be on their way back to classes. As parents realize, there is more to school than readin', writin' and 'rithmetic.

The Columbiana County Automobile Club points out, "Many youngsters will be going to and from school for the first time and for some it will be their first experience alone in traffic."

"Older children, too, will face a period of readjustment since they will be less cautious after a summer of vacation fun."

We're sure most parents already have done or are planning to do the following, but for those who haven't if your youngster is entering school for the first time and must walk to and from classes, trace the route with him or her several times before the opening bell. Familiarity with the traffic situation can't help but work on behalf of safety. The time is short, so don't put off the "walk"

Motorists also once more are urged to drive with extra care during the hours when children are going to and from classes and at ail times when in the vicinity of a school

Hoop-La Or Hooligan War?

For more than two weeks the American public has been tantalized with reports on organized crime "leaking" out of the supposedly secret files of the FBI and the Justice Department.

Without being too specific about it, Robert F. Kennedy, U.S. Attorney general has claimed "the biggest intelligence breakthrough yet" in combating racketeering and the so-called Mafia or syndicate in the United States.

Lists of names reportedly representing the nation's high council of organized crime. have been given to the public along with hints of new investigations to come.

For nearly a year, Joseph Valachi, a comparatively small-time hoodlum, has been talking to the FBI in secret. His story first was "leaked" earlier this month and has been building up, publicitywise, ever since.

COMMENTING on the case in an editorial, the New York Herald Tribune the other day described the "leak" as "representing either a breakdown in Justice Department security or - more likely - a calculated, devious means of drawing attention to the 'greatest intelligence breakthrough.'

"If the latter, it's unclear whether it was simply an effort to build up a crime-busting image for the politically-minded attorney general or, as has been suggested, part of a plan to bring public pressure for new legislation the attorney general wants - such as admissibility of wiretap evidence."

As yet, there haven't been any indictments and, as a New York prosecutor has said, there apparently hasn't been much of anything that would stand up in court.

He supplemented his opinion with the observation that Valachi's revelations about one unsolved local killing "will no doubt make an impression on TV and newspapers audiences. But our office can act only on evidence, and Valachi's statements are pure foreign - aid budgets come to mind. One man, carrying his "medicine" to rural South Korean villages at random, counted 116 completed community projects to his credit in 1962. Average cost: $200. The label on his "medicine" - which shoots holes in the Bigger Money Buys Better Friends philosophy - reads "self-help."

The rest of his script goes like this: "Do you want your children to live like you after you die?" Jim knows this line is irresistible, even wild tigers will die for their young.

Keep Pluggin'

There may be a run on picks and shovels now that a crock of coins has been unearthed in the Salem area on the heels of the fortune that was uncovered in milk cans near Troy. Ohio.

The hunt for buried treasure always has proved fascinating and most of us keep hoping our ship will come in, even should it have to plow through the rugged earth instead of the bounding main.

Discoveries such as those at Salem and Troy furnish an interesting sidelight to the everyday routine, but whether we like to admit it or not it's seldom that honest money comes that easy. And should you be fortunate enough to uncover your own treasure chest you can be sure a representative of the Internal Revenue Bureau would be there to wipe off your shovel with one hand and grab the government's snare of the loot with the other.

So it's generally smarter - and more profitable - to keep pluggin' than diggin'.

By Gail Sheehy

are you so poor?" Every village has a problem, the answer is most always: We haven't got enough water to make the rice plants grow." And right behind their backs, in almost every case, towers a perfect mountain sloping into a perfect valley lacking only a dam to make perfect irrigation reservoir.

"But you are rich here," Lee argues. "I prove. How many months do you work?" Five.

"How many months are you at leisure?" "Five." The two bitterest months drive villagers into their cottages to weave and half-starve. But for five months their fields lie fallow and they lie begging on their relatives' doorsteps.

You have 200 villagers who do nothing for five months. That means 20,000 mandays of work are wasted. Or, at a wage rate of $1 a day, you are $20,000 every year."

THE STONE FACES crack into smiles. "We rich!"

Calculations begin. Villagers figure it will take them 2.000 man-days to complete the dam. Contribution from SCF is always 10 per cent - all of $200.

A town meeting is called and the Koreans crowd in to stamp their "chop" on the contract - a show of democratic process almost identical to that in Norwalk, Conn., home of SCF where the contract is then

Work begins on an advance of 10 per cent of the 10 per cent - $20. The remaining $180 is paid on completion of the dam. There's no record of non-completion. Then for the children. The contract holds out for only one condition - after the first harvest that $200 must be repaid to the village irrigation fund and water bills collected from each farmer. And each year 10 per cent ("We have so many 10 per cents," Lee laughs) must come out of that prospering fund for the village children. Soon there will be schools.

Simple? A child would stub his toe on it The secret? "All I have to do is show them their hidden power - cooperation - and then they know what makes Mr. A rich and Mr. C a begger," shrugs Mr. Lee, releasing us at last from his staccato-voiced spell.

What Mexico is aiming at with all of this is, as President Adolfo Lopez Mateos put it when he inaugurated the unit, "A life in which every worker and his family can enjoy a better standard of living and more welfare services, with justice and dignity under a banner of properly remunerated labor.

HE EARNS too little because he is unskilled and he is too poor to acquire a trade. His children die because he cannot pay a doctor to cure them.

He has an unhappy home life because his wife knows only how to bear children - not how to make herself attractive to him, to keep herself clean, to cook or to sew the inexpensive clothing that would enable his children to be decently although inexpensively

He drir's too much because he is not content and because bad alcohol is cheap and he cannot afford any other kind of recreation. And he cannot teach his sons the skills they need to take them out of their miserable surroundings.

The sons, in turn, have nothing better to do than to join gangs that roam the streets, attacking women, robbing cars and looking for fights.

Recent Mexican governments, especially the present one, have operated on the theory that the best way to give them opportunity is through the Welfare State.

The Mexican social security system is one of the most advanced in the world and is being copied by Costa Rica and other Latin American countries. Today, nearly 5 million persons are covered by social security. The worker contributes a fraction of his wage. His employer equals the amount, and the government adds the third share.

When the Social Security Institute was established in 1943, only urban laborers were included. But a few weeks ago, 150,000 sugar cane workers (with their families, a total of 800,000 persons) were brought into the system, and the government hopes to gradually add the peasants who make up more than half of Mexoco's 37 million people.

IN THE PAST, they have been served by small units, consisting of little more than clinics. Now the emphasis is on the all-inclusive family welfare centers.

A pilot center, the Morelos unit, costing $2.6 million was opened last year in Mexico City and now the Cuauhtemoc unit, double its size, is in operation.

At the Cuauhtemoc unit, workers from San Bartolol Naucalpan, their wives and children and even relatives have the right to enjoy free of cost facilities that include 16 general medical consulting offices, 17 specialized medical offices, two well-equipped operating rooms and 23 hospital beds (most of the hospital is for outpatient work)

Youngsters who otherwise would be fated to follow in the impoverished path of their fathers are given training with lathes, milling machines and other equipment. They are taught industrial finishing, mechanical drawing, industrial electricity, metallic construction, soldering and other skills needed in the factories of the area.

For their idle hours, there is a gymnasium, an Olympic swimming pool, a soccer field, a cinder track and many more sports facilities. There are television sets, a library, a record collection, a theater where drama and oratory can be learned, pianos, art, music and modeling studios.

THE WOMEN learn decoration, sewing and cooking, not only for home use but also to complement their husband's incomes. They also are taught elementary hygiene, dancing and singing.

While they learn, their children are cared for in nurseries and kindergartens on the grounds.

All the buildings in the new unit are of excellent construction, tastefully furnished and decorated, even if they were for middle class use rather than for low-income families, they might be considered luxurious.

The Mexican government feels that it is better to build fewer units that will stand up for years than to cut corners by building shoddy ones

"Anyway," said one Social Security Institute official, "our poor THE WHITE first graders who deserve to have facilities that are each day in the 1960-61 school year had to run a screaming just as good as those enjoyed gauntlet of white housewives to

But Those Here At Hyannis Are More Influential.'

By RAYMOND MOLEY

It is not without significance that the AFL-CIO executive council has approved the Kennedy civil rights bill but opposes the mass demonstration planned for Wednesday in Washington.

The reason for this opposition is that the affair may "get out of hand." These labor leaders are hard-headed individuals who also are veterans in the practice of demonstrations.

They know the risks involved, and they realize how little those risks have been appraised by the people who have incited this protest and have planned this particular demonstration. Their apprehensions are shared by most informed people. Two basic problems are involved in preventing this huge demonstration from turning into either a colossal fiasco or disorderly, violent chaos. One is logistics. The other is means of maintaining law and order.

THE CHAIRMAN of the demonstration is A. Philip Randolph, head of the Sleeping Car Porters' Union. His statements of assurance seem loaded with wishful thinking.

Under him in the management is Bayard Rustin, whose past record as revealed in congressional debate and in the press is, in Sam Weller's phrase, "extensive but peculiar. Among the many assistant managers are clergymen, whose sincerity and eloquence cannot be challenged but whose capacity for managing large physical operations is negligible.

Among the logistical problems are these: It's said that some 28,000 demonstrators will arrive by various railroads. The rest, numbering in various estimates from 75,000 to 200,000 will get there by bus or automobile or gather from Washington and its environs.

While all these figures are purely hypothetical, there will assuredly be a mammoth mass of people from all points of the compass, of all ranges of education and character and most

"Don't panic, Roscoe! . . . They'll probably clean up after they're finished! They know the park regulations as well as anybody!

will be relative strangers one to be present. If things get out of hand, it would take some time

THERE MUST be parking for buses and automobiles. Means must be found for feeding the multitude. If, and this seems not only possible but probable, many are compelled to remain in Washington overnight, they must be billetted. Mr. Randolph has given assurance that there will be internal order within the crowd: "We have no fear of anybody infiltrating this march. We have complete control." Orders will be given by loud speakers and "bull-horns."

Consider the immense problems involved in moving and maintaining several divisions of an army. But the members of such divisions have been trained and disciplined, and they are command ed all down the line by experienced uniformed officers.

This mass of humanity in Washington will have none of those requirements. Most will be inspired to a point at which emotion may take over reason. Except for certain police precautions, there will be nothing to prevent segments of the mass from taking off to the Capitol or the White House or elsewhere.

SO FAR as the prevention of infiltration by characters whose purpose is to promote violence is concerned, we have nothing but the word of Randolph and others that no such people will be allowed in the ranks. To maintain law and order in behalf of the government and the public, there is, first, the Police Department of the District of Columbia. The size of this force is comparable with those of urban areas elsewhere. It numbers about 2,900 officers. Boston, with a smaller population than the district, has a force of comparable size. To supplement this force, there will be 2,000 volunteer National Guardsmen, presumably in uniform Nearby in military bases are certain units which have had training in dealing with mob violence. But there has been no

Voting Slated In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss., (AP) — Mississippi voters choose Tuesday between two Democratic guberna-torial candidates, each of whom accuses the other of playing footsie with the national Democratic administration.

Speaker Terms Liquor Industry U.S. Malignancy

COLUMBUS. Ohio (AP) - The alcoholic beverage industry was described today as a malignancy on the nation's health by Dr. E. Irene Boardman of Prospect, Conn.

Dr. Boardman, in a speech prepared for a panel program at the 89th annual convention of the National Woman's Christian Temper ance Union, asserted:

"Alcohol destroys the health of an individual, and as more and more individuals become alcoholics, the health of the nation, state and community is affected, economically as well as socially. . .

A national "economic malignancy" is indicated, she said, by the fact that American drinkers spend $12.5 billion a year for alcoholic beverages, rather than for economic and social assets such as homes, schools, and the like.

"Alcohol and alcoholism must eventually be recognized by our public health services as a condition to be eradicated," she said.

Here's why: We took a stop watch and tested hurry! 19 batches of laundry. Each hanging included 5 loads which the average lines hold.

We found that it is far better to pick up whatever came from depressed. the washing machine, and is in your laundry basket unsorted, give it a big snap and then hang of clothes you will think, "My City Hospital with a broken back. it above the point nearest your laundry basket.

Why? ing and it takes too long to dig So let's get our ironing done the into the basket to find a pillow slip that belongs with another pillow slip and hang them next to each other.

IT IS FAR better to go on and hang your five loads of laundry any old way and then after it is dry, take it down the way you want to sort it.

In the first place your clothes are not wet then and they are not nearly as heavy. This saves lots of energy. If you doubt this, weigh (which we did) the same basket of wet laundry when you hang it up and weigh it when

Now . . . when taking it off the line, first remove the articles which require tedious ironing and starching. Put these in the bottom of your basket.

Next, go along the line and pick off the things which require very little ironing, such as your pillow slips, etc. (These pillow slips and sheets may be laid on the top of your ironing board as a cover before you get to ironing the tedious stuff.) This way you are ironing the pillow slips the same time you are ironing Mary's dress. Saves more time.

Besides, the pillow slips will have been ironed four or five times, which is far better than that swipe you usually give them when ironing them individually. On top of this basketload of tedious ironing lay your husband's

Then your dishtowels, and bath towels . . . these bath towels will give your laundry basket a new flat surface and a better level to put the other things on and prevent further wrinkles.

NEXT TAKE down all of your socks, etc. When removing socks it is my opinion that you will save time, if, as you pick one sock off the line, you will look where its mate is hung and fold them together at this time. This will save hours of drudgery and later mating them.

Now, put your drip drys on top of this. This procedure is not to be misconstrued as something one has to do. Do it any way you like, because I do not know what you iron and what you don't iron.

The one great thing about this method is the psychological effect it has on the housewife.

QUESTION: Why is "hamburger" called that when it isn't made of ham?

ANSWER: Hamburgers have nothing to do with ham; they are made of ground beef. They are a miniature form of a ground meat dish which came to be called hamburg steak. Some cooking experts say that hamburg was first heard of around 1900. But the Boston Journal in 1888 gives this recipe, "We take a chicken and boil it . . . when it is cold we cut it up as they do meat to make hamburg steak." There is little doubt that the name hamburg steak is connected with the town of Hamburg in Germany. There is a special breed of small domestic chicken with blue legs and rose combs called the hamburg, from the town where it either originated or was developed. No doubt these chickens were chopped up to make hamburg steak. Hamburg is a great world trading port. Probably because of trade with America and the fact that Americans particularly like meat, hamburg steak began to appear everywhere here. Then came hamburgers.

FOR YOU TO DO: Here is a simple cheeseburger recipe to try on your friends. First pat out the hamburgers and cook them on both sides. Then place on bottom half of bun, lay a slice of tomato on top, and then a slice of cheese. Now put this under the broiler until the cheese melts. Then add top of bun. (Better be prepared for seconds.)
